Texas Roadhouse Signature Rolls Allergens

Texas Roadhouse rolls contain allergens such as wheat, milk, and eggs. These allergens are common in many bread products due to the ingredients used in their preparation. If you have allergies to any of these substances, it's important to avoid these rolls or discuss alternatives with the restaurant staff.

Fall-Off-The-Bone Ribs Allergens

Fall-Off-The-Bone Ribs contain soybean oil, which is used in the grilling process.

For those with other food allergies, it’s important to note that Texas Roadhouse uses peanut oil for frying, and peanuts are available on the tables, posing a risk of cross-contamination for those with peanut allergies. Milk and eggs are present in other dishes and in baked goods like rolls.
